GET THE WORKPLACE
HARASSMENT BILL PASSED

Managing Partner Amanda Farahany Testifies in Support of the Workplace Harassment Bill

Dear friends,

We have important news regarding a significant development in Georgia's employment law landscape. A new bill, known as the Workplace Harassment Bill, is currently under consideration in the House Judiciary sub-committee. With the help of renowned attorney Amanda Farahany, this legislation can potentially reshape our state's approach to workplace safety and dignity.

Amanda Farahany, with her extensive experience in employment law, particularly in cases related to sexual harassment and workplace discrimination, has been an unwavering advocate for victims of these injustices. Her dedication to securing civil justice for all employees is the driving force behind this bill.

The Workplace Harassment Bill, if passed, will serve as a beacon of hope for workers across Georgia. It aims to foster a safer, more equitable work environment, free from harassment and discrimination.

This bill has faced opposition from various Chambers of Commerce and still has not been voted on. However, you can help. The House Judiciary Committee must hear from constituents like YOU about the importance of this bill.
