GEORGIA LAW RESTRICTS ABORTIONS BUT DOESN'T PROTECT WOMEN IN THE WORKFORCE

In a recent Fox 5 Atlanta segment, Barrett & Farahany Managing Partner Amanda Farahany discusses Georgia's lack of protections for working mothers, highlighting the importance of legal protections such as the Pregnancy Protection Act, a proposed bill she helped draft last year that would allow women to sue employers with only 10 employees for pregnancy discrimination.

Amanda shares how crucial a change in the law is, stating, “Georgia [does not] have any laws to protect pregnant employees. There is the federal law [... but] the federal law only applies to companies that have 15 or more employees.” Read the full piece here.
